ARMY

Counterintelligence

Army Counterintelligence works to protect Department of Army personnel, technology and classified information that resides in each unit and to enhance CI/CE/LE partnerships and information sharing among public and private organizations.

Prompt reporting of foreign collection attempts is critical to an effective CI program. Immediately notify the nearest CI office should you have any reason to believe that your unit or one of its members has been a target of a foreign collection attempt.

Terrorists generally do not provide a preemptive warning and they methodically conduct surveillance/reconnaissance of an objective prior to an attack. DoD personnel can mitigate the risk by using some of the following tips:

- Awareness is a powerful weapon
- Knowledge of terrorist techniques & methods can help prevent an attack
- Random antiterrorism measures (RAM) make life difficult for prospective terrorist
- Static defenses increase friendly risk; make constant adjustments to avoid this scenario
- Be creative, “highly visible and unpredictable”
- Assessments sustain active improvements in defensive posture
- Include terrorist considerations into your Intelligence preparation
- Maintain solid link with nearby CI office
